What is available at Malach CVH?

Registered users and visitors can work with three separate collections of oral history interviews. The first, and the most extensive, is USC Shoah Foundation’s Visual History Archive (over 50,000 interviews). Second available resource is Refugee Voices archive, created by the Association of Jewish Refugees (150 interviews) recently.

Scientific and educational utilization of oral history

Apart from providing technical and institutional conditions for hosting the oral history collections described above in detail, Malach CVH aims to facilitate the scientific and educational utilization of the data. I will describe some of the most recent research and educational projects related to the USC Shoah Foundation’s Visual History Archive, since — to my knowledge — the other two resources have not yet been consistently utilized in any similar enterprise.
